Writing Truth and Beauty: Using Your Personal Photos for Creative Writing in Poetry and Prose Kelly DuMar

The photos we save and the photos we take show what we care about and hope to preserve, what moves and mystifies us, the people, places, stories, and experiences that bring meaning into our lives. In this workshop, we'll write creatively from personal photos that arrest our attention and unpack why they do.

Making More of Memoir: Tools for Drawing Readers To and Into Your Nonfiction Writing Judy Huge

Coaxing a "sympathetic resonance from the reader" is the difference between writing the stories people choose to read on airplanes and the ones that speak gently to the depths of the human spirit. This workshop provides both new and experienced writers with practical tools and personal advice for adding depth to your nonfiction writing: keys to building better bridges between yourself, your reader, and the world outside your door.
